Test of the Code of Conduct and expertise required under the Financial Services Act

The Financial Services Act (FinSA) will require that client advisors entered in the client register must have sufficient knowledge of the Code of Conduct set out by the FinSA and the necessary expertise required to perform their activities.

The obligation to be entered into the client register applies to e.g. client advisors from foreign banks and non-FINMA supervised financial institutions.

The obligations to have sufficient knowledge of the Code of Conduct and the necessary expertise applies also to client advisors employed by financial institutions supervised directly by FINMA.

Our solution

- Kryterion, a leading global test provider, offers a cost-efficient test that is the new benchmark for financial service providers and that checks the knowledge of the Code of Conduct of client advisors as well as the expertise required to perform their activities under the FinSA.
- The online test consists of multiple segments that can be tested on a stand-alone or aggregate basis and lasts between 45 and 180 minutes.
- The test can be used in examinations of external asset managers, in HR processes or in tests of counterparties.
- PwC offers high-end consulting and training services related to all aspects of FinSA.
